Faith is an anchor

My children do not let troubles crash you and tear you into little pieces to where you forget from where your help comes from. I will take those things that are harmful to you away from you but there are those things that I want you to keep, fight for those by holding tightly to your faith in me. After you have done all you know to do stand and watch me work on your behalf. I see the hardships you are going through, the painful wound that is your broken heart. I see your crushed spirit and bitterness crawling into your heart. I feel your pain, I know it, I understand it. Not very long ago I went through the same thing. The pain of rejection, betrayal and loneliness. Do not let your pain become your focus. Do not lock yourself up in a narrow corridor full of hurt with no end in sight. I am your God, I am able to heal your hurt, mend your broken heart and refresh your weakened spirit. I am God; I am for you my children, to do good unto you now and always. I can hear your heart my child, it speaks to me, it is screaming silently within you, helpless, hopeless, so full of pain. I hear you and I respond. If you would stop screaming for a moment you will hear my gentle voice. You have let your circumstances dictate how you should feel and you have forgotten to use your faith to reach me for without faith it is impossible to produce fruit. Be still, calm your spirit and listen to my voice. I am speaking to you, directing you but you must quiet down on the inside in order to hear me. Oh child when will you realize I am bigger than any problems you will ever face? I cannot give you a burden that you cannot carry, or allow situations in your life from which I cannot deliver you, but your faith has to remain steady. Stop with the wavering to and fro, one day your faith is so strong it touches heaven and other days so small it can barely be found. I despise doubt and unbelief; they are the enemies of faith. Pick a side and stick with it. I tell you truthfully that I am right now seeking whom I may bless exceedingly because they trust in me wholeheartedly. I will prove that I am not a liar; I will honor the faith of those who steadfastly hold on to me. Decide whether you will be one of these whom I will exalt by my glory. Yes you live in the last days but the days of faith are not numbered, you must keep on living until you draw your last breath here on earth. That means remain in love, practice perseverance and hold on to your faith, for all have a measure of faith, none has been left lacking. Trust me, believe in me, know that I am God, understand that I am for you and not against you. Stretch your faith, let it reach as far as the heavens and as you stretch it I will lower my scepter of grace and favor to meet your faith and I will perform that which you ask of me. I will do it and I will be glorified in it. Only believe, no more here today gone tomorrow so called faith. This is not faith! Faith is an anchor, it is steady, it holds still and comes through, in the middle of a storm it is a lighthouse, it gives you direction and focus. Therefore my child determine to hold on to your faith no matter the circumstances around you. I love you. Hear me, believe me!

Jesus, Amen.
